Curriculum vitae

Bart Lambregts was born on 22 October 1970 in Alkmaar. He studied civil engineering at the Delft University of Technology and specialized in infrastructure planning. He received his Master of Science in 1995, after completing a thesis on sustainable development in the Gaza Strip. Since then he has subsequently worked for Witteveen+Bos Consulting Engineers in Deventer, the OTB Research Institute for Housing, Urban and Mobility Studies of Delft University of Technology, and, since 2003, the Amsterdam institute for Metropolitan and International Development Studies (AMIDSt) of the University of Amsterdam. Since 1-1-2009 he is also attached to the Department of Urban and Environmental Planning of the Faculty of Architecture of Kasetsart University in Bangkok. His main research interests include polycentric spatial developments in metropolitan contexts and the functioning of advanced producer services industries under conditions of globalization. He has lectured in various courses on urban and transportation planning and economic geography. He currently lives and works in Bangkok, Thailand.
