This 4-year period of research at SILS-CNS University of Amsterdam is an invaluable experience and a spectacular journey of personal growth. Struggled and survived the journey, I feel deeply indebted to my family, friends and colleagues, without their tremendous help and support it is impossible to reach to this point.

I want to give my gratitude first to my promoter Prof. Dr. Marian Joëls and co-promoter Dr. Harm Krugers. Marian and Harm have tremendously broadened my academic horizon and challenged my academic performance, and more importantly offered me the opportunity to continue my research and eventually finish the phd study. Their encouragement and trust contributes greatly to today's achievement.

I shall thank Dr. J.E. Olijslagers for her help on establishing the electrophysiology experiment during the early period of my research; Dr. Henk Karst and Dr. Lutz Liebmann for their technical support; Ms. Els Velzing for her support on the projects (esp. the setup of primary culture experiment in the lab). I would also like to give my sincere gratitude to Prof. Dr. Casper Hoogenraad for his instruction on hippocampal primary culture experiment as well as his advice on the projects and Prof. Dr. Melly Oitzl for all the discussion on behavioral experiments.

Great thankfulness should also be attributed to many other colleagues: Dr. Paul Lucassen, Dr. Rob de Heus, Dr Charlotte Oomen, Dr Felisa van hasselt, Dr Neeltje van Gemert, Dr. Olof Wiegert, as well as Qian Wang, Pu Hu, Anup Gopalakrishnapillai, Natasha Pasricha, Mike Marlatt, Sandra Cornelisse, Edwin Jousma, Eva Naninck, André Siemens, Michiel. Stumpel, Jordi Wester, Chris Wijs.

I would like to thank Dr. Zhenwei Pu. Since the day Zhenwei picked me up at the airport when I first arrived in Amsterdam, he has always been supportive on my research work and personal life. He challenged my perspectives, introduced me new concepts, sharpened and broadened my vision. Zhenwei helped me tremendously during the dark period of my life and inspired me to pursuit my own dream. My gratitude for his help and inspiration has already gone beyond words.

A deep gratitude should be given to my parents, who have been supporting me all the time. Great thankfulness should also be given to my mentor Zhongsong Sun, who has been giving all kinds of support and invaluable advice in my personal life. Finally but most importantly, dear Yue, my life has become more colorful by your presence, thank you very much for all the support.
