If

Frans van Eemeren had not initiated the NWO-project on argumentative indicators and had not offered me the freedom and the confidence that he did,

Agnes van Rees had not lent me her sharp eye, Erik Krabbe had not shown his genuine interest, had not provided his many critical remarks on both content and grammar and had not shared his valuable proposals for improvement,

Tjark Kruiger and Erik Viskil had not first raised my interest in argumentation theory and had not by means of their lectures defied me to think,

Rob Grootendorst had not encouraged me to start this research and had not pointed out to me that research can take its own direction, the members of the 'promoteam', especially Mas Fopma and Jan Albert van Laar, had not had the endurance to hear me out on many occasions, Menno van de Koppel, Elliott Eisenberg and Melle Hammer had not supported me in the production of the book, Stefanieke Veenstra had not been so utterly uncritical, Egon had not lovingly given me all this room for manoeuvre, my parents had not been my parents ...

then

I would never have succeeded in writing this thesis.
